VOLUME 3 NUMBER 1

JANUARY 2014

ACHIEVING YOUR DREAMS IN 2014

FYI: THIS THEME IS MY ORIGINAL THOUGHT! I posted on FB for a friend who was looking for a theme.

Sounds good to me! And if saying it was all it took, 2014 would be full of happy people but the truth is, that's not enough! If a theme was enough for one to actually achieve his/her dreams, that would be great!

Unfortunately many won't achieve anything and as mean as that may sound it is so true. Achieving anything means: process, sacrifice, commitment, determination and confidence.

Know that anything one desires requires strategic planning to say the least.

1) Write the Vision! This is probably the single most important part of achieving anything is writing. I cannot tell you how difficult it is to achieve ANYTHING that isn't written. Out of sight means out of mind! When the vision isn't clear or written the commitment to achieving it and the actions required will not be there either.

If a person requests prayer then he or she is probably serious about it. And while your first response of empathy is great, it would be better to actually pray.

What about praying for that person right then and there?! Don't be ashamed, there are a number of things we do in public, curse(yes the saints will curse), drink, laugh out loud, wear pj's in public so why should prayer be embarrassing? Whether its a FaceBook request, over the phone or even in a public place.....WHAT SHOULD THE SAINTS DO? PRAY when asked to pray. Think about it.

WHAT'S THE WORD?

There is always a new buzz in the air. There is always something new that we are talking about.

The year of 2013 ended and 2014 began with a few less Pastors. One of the largest stories in the Christian Community is the suicides which took place in the last quarter of the year and the fact that they were Pastors. Leading anyone isn't easy but I dare to say that only job as or more stressful than being President is being a Pastor. To lead a group of
